PRIVATE MAIL BOXES

Their Use Assists Carriers in Prompt Delivery

The postoffice department invites your attention to the benefits to be derived from the use of mail receptacles. Such receptacles, in the form of a box or a slot in the door, obviate the necessity of patrons responding to the carrier's call at inconvenient moments, permit the safe delivery of mail at all times, and contribute materially to the efficiency of the service. When not compelled to await a response to his ring, the carrier is enabled to cover his route more expeditiously and make prompt deliveries, especially to those residing near the end of his route. With a safe place in which to deposit the mail at all times the carrier is enabled to reduce to a minimum the amount of mail returned to the office because of the temporary absence of patrons or failure to get prompt response to his ring.

AN ENGLISHMAN'S VIEWS

Visitor To Bennington Writes on War Questions

J. Hamilton Long, an Englishman who lives at Liverpool was a guest in Bennington last year of Miss Jennie Valentine and other friends. Since the present war broke out he has written Miss Valentine an interesting letter on conditions in Great Britain in relation to affairs in Europe. His letter is as follows:

As the last two months have been probably the most critical in the history of England for at least a century, I feel it would be of interest to friends elsewhere and also to the coming generation of our family to record a few salient points and the impression of one, who like myself, has been a little acquainted with the inner history of the various movements, although only to a small extent.

The Home Rule Bill passed by the House of Commons for the third time and defeated by the House of Lords, can under the Parliament Act at any moment be made law by the signature of the King, provided this is done before Parliament is prorogued, but only word for word as passed three times without a single alteration.

Any alteration means three more sessions. If this bill had been passed there would have been civil war in Ireland immediately, and the Ulster Volunteers, numbering over 100,000 well armed and well drilled men, would have held Ulster against all attack.

The British army and even the British navy would not have served against the loyal North, which has stood for King and Country so faithfully while the Catholic Provinces of Ireland have been honeycombed with disaffection. The Nationalist forces, undisciplined and badly armed, could have made no impression in the North, but the state of the whole of Great Britain would have been appalling, as quite half the nation is against Home Rule and in sympathy with Ulster.

A great effort was made by the King to settle the question but the Nationalists wanted too much. As a matter of fact it could have been settled if the Ulster party had been content to accept the exclusion of the counties of Down, Antrim, Londonderry and Cavan only, while if the Nationalists had allowed County Tyrone to be excluded also, the Ulster party would have reluctantly accepted the situation; but over Tyrone neither party would give way, so the Amending Bill which, as submitted, provided for some sort of exclusion by county vote, and which the House of Lords altered by excluding the whole of Ulster, was shelved also for the moment.

Then came the Dublin Riots suppressed by the Military. The Government weak and helpless, both sides furious and in a few days all would have been over.

Europe generally realized that all sober men in Britain considered civil war a certainty, and so Germany and Austria thought their time had come. This was Wednesday, 22nd July.

On Thursday 23rd July, Austria presented her ultimatum to Serbia, making demands which no self-respecting independent State could accept, and calling for a reply in forty-eight hours. To the surprise of most people Serbia accepted nearly every demand, only referring two important ones to arbitration. We now know this was owing to pressure from Russia, who was determined to avoid war if possible, although such a move to a Slav State was an indirect challenge to Russia. We now also know it was part of a deliberate plan to draw Russia in, as it was believed Russia was quite unprepared for war.

On the 25th July Austria declared she would not accept Serbia's reply, and withdrew her Minister from Belgrade. On the 26th, Sir Edward Grey took the unusual step of inviting by telegraph Germany, France, and Italy to join in trying to stop war. France and Italy agreed, Germany declined.

28th. Austria declared war on Serbia. 29th. Russia began to mobilize and Germany at once began to protest, and on the 30th, proclaimed Martial Law.

Meanwhile England was making frantic efforts to keep the peace, which Germany pretended to help, but really was preparing hard for war.

England, knowing if Germany declared war on Russia, France by the terms of her alliance, would have to come in, did her best. Germany tried to bribe England to be neutral and we intimated that we could allow no naval movement against France, but if the neutrality of Belgium were preserved we should feel different as to actual participation. England also stated that Germany proposed any reasonable method of peace she would urge it upon France and Russia, and if they refused England would keep out altogether; these proposals Germany ignored.

Germany then tried to provoke

WARRING NATIONS NOW IN NO MOOD TO TALK PEACE

President Abandons Second Attempt at Mediation

LOOKS LIKE "FINISH FIGHT"

Diplomats Believe that One Side Must Obtain Advantage Before Intervention Is Possible

Washington, Sept. 18.—President Wilson today decided to definitely abandon his second effort to bring peace to Europe, and will await a more opportune time, when a third suggestion of mediation will be pressed. This will not be until there is a material change in the fortunes of either the allies or Germans in the war.

The President's decision was reached on the unsatisfactory nature of Germany's reply to the informal discussion of peace plans through Ambassador Gerard, and secondly, on the extremely uncompromising attitude of the British, French and Russian governments as expressed both through their embassies in Washington and their diplomatic officers abroad.

"The allies have not thought of peace and do not intend to until the ends they have been forced to seek have been achieved," was the grim comment of one of the veteran diplomats of the allied powers today.

Nowhere in diplomatic circles is the hope expressed that the exchange of messages between the President and the German government will be fruitful of peace now, or at any time in the immediate future. This pessimistic view is based primarily upon the belief of both sides that the longer peace is deferred the more advantageous will be a settlement dictated by the victors. It is freely stated that the war will not be a "draw," and that one side or the other must obtain a decided advantage before intervention will be possible.

DYNAMITED TROUT STREAM

Charge Brought Against Two Hoosick Men

Deputy Sheriff James Mooney of Hoosick lodged in jail on Thursday at Troy Warren Stewart of North Hoosick, accused of violation of the fish and game law. It is alleged that the prisoner brought in, with his cousin, Oscar Stewart, practically ruined what is known as the White Creek in North Hoosick, by using in it dynamite, and killing many brook trout. It is also alleged that he and his cousin have unlawfully killed deer, and Game Protector C. A. Johnson has been long making up a case against them. He and Deputy Sheriff Mooney finally arrested the men and arraigned them Wednesday night before Justice of the Peace Portman. The state fish and game commission was represented at the examination by Deputy Attorney General Bates, and the accused were represented by Attorney William A. Cahill. Oscar Stewart waived examination and gave bail to await the action of the grand jury, and the adjourned until next Tuesday, he demanding a jury trial. In default of bail he was committed to jail. The case is attracting a great deal of interest among sportsmen in Hoosick and adjoining towns.

Berlin, Sept. 18, 1:12 p. m. (via London).—This official announcement was made at the headquarters of the general staff last evening: "No decision yet has resulted in the battle between the Oise and the Meuse, but certain signs indicate that the power of resistance of the enemy is relaxing."

MINISTER CARDEN MAY REGRET HIS INTERVIEW

Government Sends Formal Note to Great Britain

IT MAY BE REPUDIATED

Official Has Caused United States Considerable Annoyance in Mexico

Washington, Sept. 19.—The United States government has sent a formal note to Great Britain inquiring if the recent interview attributed to Sir Lionel Carden, British minister to Mexico, criticizing President Wilson for withdrawing American forces from Vera Cruz, was accurate in any part. An indication of the displeasure of the American government over the incident is understood to have been conveyed in the note. Just what is expected to be the outcome of the report was not explained by high officials last night, but it would occasion no surprise in Washington if a complete repudiation of whatever views Sir Lionel may have expressed would be issued by the British foreign office. It is also considered possible among diplomats that Sir Lionel may not be accredited to Brazil, his new post, because of the incident.

The American government has had occasion more than once to intimate to the British foreign office that Sir Lionel Carden was thwarting the Mexican policy of the American government.

Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador at Washington, already has expressed his own regret for the incident, apologizing personally to the state department.

HOME RULE FOR IRELAND

Royal Assent Given to the New Measure

London, Sept. 19.—Scenes of enthusiasm unusual in the staid legislative chambers of Westminster palace were enacted yesterday, when the two hours of Parliament were prorogued. King George was absent inspecting the troops, and his speech was read in the House of Lords by Viscount Haldane, the lord high chancellor, and in the House of Commons by John H. Whittier, the deputy speaker.

When the announcement was made in the House of Lords that the royal assent had been given to the Irish home-rule and the Welsh church disestablishment bills, and to a number of emergency bills, cheers were given for the passing of the Irish and the Welsh bills. On the announcement of the passing of the Irish home-rule bill in the House of Commons, the nationalists and liberals broke into loud cheers, which were repeated again. Will Crooks, the labor leader, asked if it was in order to sing "God Save the King." Without waiting for permission he started the first verse himself, and then broke down with emotion. The anthem was taken up by the spectators in the gallery as well as by the members, and the singing was heard in the palace yard. As the members filed out of the chamber Mr. Crooks cried out, "God save Ireland!" John Redmond, the Irish nationalist leader, replied, "God save England!"

The allies claim to have made slight progress at some points against the German right wing north of the River Aisne and to have repulsed counter-attacks there and between Croonne and Rheims, while they say in the center and on the right the Germans are acting purely on the defensive having "dug themselves into entrenchments."

The German official reports are almost identical with those of their enemies. They say that no decision has yet been reached, but that the allies power of resistance is relaxing, that a French attempt to break their right has failed, that in the center the Germans are gaining ground slowly and that allies from Verdun have been repulsed.

It would seem from all this that the commanding generals have not yet found the weak points in their opponents dispositions and that each is withholding his determined blow for, as Lord Kitchener said in the House of Lords, "the right moment."

The Germans, having reached selected positions, which they have strongly fortified, would appear to have the advantage according to military critics, but for the fact that they must defend the whole of their front to make good their retirement should an attack by their side fail or a smashing blow from the allies break their line while the Anglo-French forces are declared to be free to mass at any point Gen. Joffre may select as most suitable for attack.
